Welcome

This hub serves as a reference to guide the outward communication and design across all touch points of the Ordergroove brand, which should feel bold, modern, energetic and human.

It introduces our identity and explains the guiding principles for each element of our brand: the way we look, sound, and behave. In each section, you will find details about the many layers that, together, are Ordergroove.

This guide outlines recommendations for tactical messaging, copywriting, logo usage, brand colors and gradients, typography, photography, iconography and other brand elements.

To download the full brand guide, for internal uses, find the Ordergroove Brand Guidelines PDF here.

You can access newly branded templates and resources in the navigation above or by clicking here.

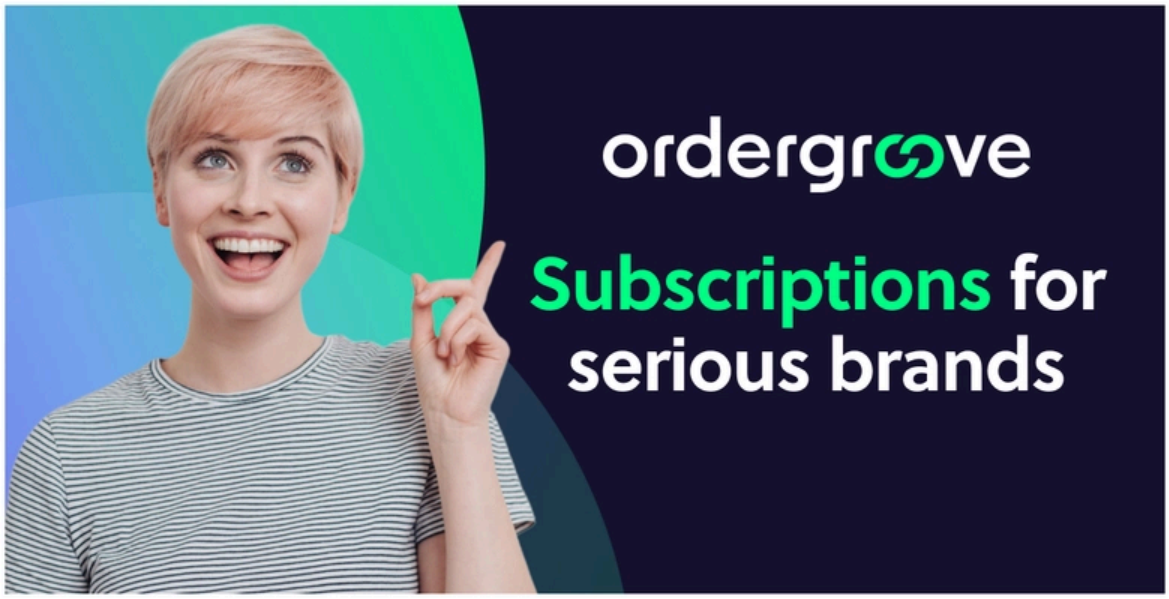

For additional information, comments, questions, or if you'd like to see additional content added to Ordergroove's Brand Guidelines and Resources please reach out to Zack Jenkins.

Customer Personas

When creating on behalf of Ordergroove, keep the following personas in mind to ensure we remain effective, consistent, purposeful.

Our Primary Persona: The Navigator

Job Title: eCommerce Director or Marketing VP

Role: Solution investigator, buyer
Age: 33-45 years old
Gender: Depending on industry, skews slightly more male than female

Education: Bachelor's Degree, MBA likely
Income: $150-250k

Family Life: Likely married with pets and/or young child
Location: Urban and suburban within 1 hour of top 10 US-DMAs

The Navigator is an elder millennial or younger Gen X who is working hard to have the life they've envisioned for themselves, keeping family and their professional life in balance while working their way up the ladder. Driven to achieve goals and realize growth, they're hands-on problem solvers during the workday that will do what it takes to achieve positive outcomes. They do their best not to bring work home with them, but have been known to send some late evening emails here and there. Presenting a polished image and associating with high-fidelity brands is important, but not the end-all-be-all for how the Navigator moves through the world. They're independent thinkers but appreciate high-quality work in and from others.

Our Secondary Personas: The Committee, The Tech Leader

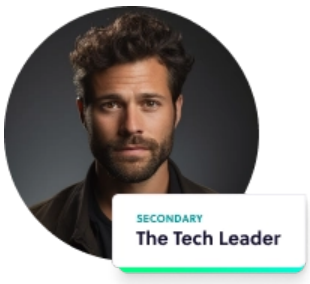

Job Title: CMO, CEO, CDO, COO

Role: stakeholder, buying committee
Age: 42-60 years old
Gender: Skews more male

Education: likely holds Master's Degree
Income: 250k+

Family Life: Likely married or divorced with children
Location: Suburban

The Committee is a Gen X business leader with decades of experience. They're pretty established in their life and how they move through the world. Likely with married or divorced children (multiple) around college-aged, the Committee individuals are specialized in their fields and carry heavy influence on whether tools can or will be viable in the broader business stack. They don't spend a lot of time researching. They want a partner that they can rely on now and in the future. They want results.

Job Title: CTO, VP of Engineering

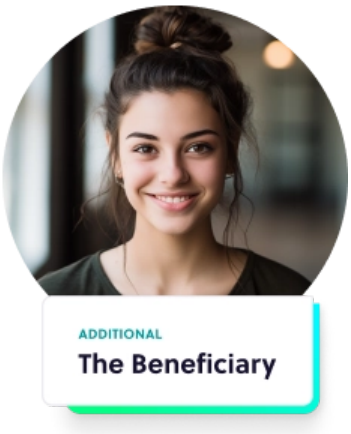

Role: stakeholder, buying committee
Age: 40-50 years old
Gender: Skews more male

Education: often holds a Master's degree
Income: 200k+

Family Life: Likely engaged or married with young children
Location: Urban and suburban

The Tech Leader is responsible for the tech stack and they want solutions that are reliable, scalable, and extremely flexible so they can create solutions that meet their unique needs. And their needs are often felt as unique and special. They want straight and clear answers, backed up by technological explanations of how things work and data. They're thorough and want easy access to supporting resources and materials. Largely they appreciate straight-shooters and are turned off by overly salesy or performative pitches.

Additional Persona: The Beneficiary

Job Title: Manager / Senior Manager of eCommerce Marketing, Customer

Role: User
Age: 22-25 years old
Gender: Skews slightly more female

Education: Bachelor's Degree
Income: $75-125k

Family Life: More likely to be single or dating/unmarried
Location: Urban or suburban (if living with family)

The Beneficiary for Ordergroove's technology is likely Gen Z or a younger millennial (except in the case of the consumer who spans age ranges) and cares about design and ease of use. The Beneficiary may skew more Reactive than Proactive. They rely on intuitive design to solve most problems and can be coached, but aren't as likely to spend deep amounts of time researching ways of solving problems outside of the initial scope of their role. Their willingness to ask questions or engage independently without their boss's involvement may vary. Career advancement is of interest to them, but not at the expense of work life balance. Operational ease of tools in their stack is important to get them more engaged.

Tone of Voice

Our verbal identity is the articulation of Ordergroove's brand through language. A strong, consistent verbal identity is clear, distinct, and differentiated.

Brands speak like people. People are unique.
By defining Ordergroove's personality, we can set guidelines for how we speak in order to stand apart and break away from the rest. We created the following Tone of Voice with our Customer Personas, Market Positioning, and Company Values in mind.

01
Expert
We speak intelligently and intuitively, as growth experts with deep expertise in omni-channel commerce. With decades of combined experience supporting some of the world's top brands, Ordergroove helps merchants navigate the ever changing world of commerce with confidence because we've seen and driven growth through it all, and we make our expertise accessible for Ordergroove merchants.

02
Championing
First and foremost, Ordergroove exists to help merchants grow recurring revenue. That means prioritizing our merchants' best interests and celebrating their wins as if they were our own. When they thrive, we thrive, and we'll always aim to be the first to highlight how much they've grown or how well they've improved for their customers.

Purposeful
There's so much noise in the category, but we aren't fussed. We work and communicate with intention. We understand what merchants need to do to drive their business forward, how things need to be built to delight their customers, and we show them how to focus on growing a masterful subscription experience. We keep our eyes on the prize, and help our merchants stay focused on what really matters.

04
Humbly Confident
We speak from experience, knowledge, and knowhow. We're humble and approachable, but we know what we're talking about and aren't afraid to share our knowledge and challenge the status quo. We back our claims with data and customer stories. We don't use kitschy or clout-chasing buzzwords because we're professionals. We're inclusive, but we can go deep and technical when required.

Ordergroove has a voice and tone archetype we're calling The Recurring Revenue Guide.

Verbal Persona

The goal of aligning the Ordergroove Brand Voice to a Verbal Persona is to train everyone in the company, regardless of department or seniority, on how to speak and write (and therefore how to represent) Ordergroove in the same light. In support of our Merchant Growth Culture, understanding how to embody the Recurring Revenue Guide will make your daily work more efficient and effective.

Your Recurring Revenue Guide

The Recurring Revenue Guide exists to drive successful growth for merchants' subscription and membership programs. They (we) live for it!

When we write and speak, we sound like an expert.
We are a growth and retention specialist with deep experience in omnichannel commerce and monetization modeling. Our intelligence stems from decades of working with leading brands and retailers. With empathy, we are able to intelligently dial up or down the language we use to speak at the merchant's level.

The Recurring Revenue Guide is a championing partner for the merchants using Ordergroove.
No one understands the challenges modern retailers and DTC brands are facing post-pandemic quite like Ordergroove, so a win for our customers/merchants using Ordergroove is a win for all, and worth celebrating.

Committed to doing purposeful work.
We focus on outcomes, never saying more than needs to be said nor creating busywork for the sake of appearing useful. We've seen commerce tech trends come and go, while studying the consumer shopping trends that last and propel commerce forward. Through it all, the Recurring Revenue Guide knows that committing to recurring revenue fundamentals is best for eCommerce brands looking to drive lasting, profitable growth.

With a humble, confident demeanor, we are comfortable leading the way and pushing the envelope.
We skate to where the puck is going to be, not where it has been, and are comfortable bringing others with us through education and empathy. We don't brag or boast unnecessarily, but instead assume the role of a supportive leader as we are uniquely positioned to drive change in an effort to make commerce better for all.

We believe John Legend is a guiding and referential example of an individual who is Experienced, Championing, Purposeful, and Confident.

His work with singers on The Voice, his public advocacy, and how he navigates being in a highly visible marriage are examples of how he moves through a variety of professional and personal experiences. If he knew about eCommerce and subscriptions like we do, rather than music, he'd be the Recurring Revenue Guide.

When writing on behalf of Ordergroove, all Ordergroove representatives should embody this persona to ensure your writing sounds like Ordergroove. The following Youtube Videos can serve references this tone of voice: Video 1, Video 2, Video 3.

Recommendations

With the Brand Voice coming to life, keep the following in mind:

Groove puns, we don’t need them.
We have fun, but have grown up and grown out of needing to make kitschy puns with our brand name. Those that exist internally may remain internal. Externally, no puns.

Humor isn’t a major part of our brand.
Though dad jokes may be permissible in select instances, reserve humor for engagements where we have an already-existing relationship with the Merchant or Partner.

Technical language
The Product Team has spec’d and housed definitions within Knowledge Center and Academy. We reserve technical language when talking about specific tools or features. We dial up or dial down our technical language based on who we are talking to. For example, we do not need to use marketing acronyms when speaking with engineers.

Sector-specific terminology
Speak like customers in 1-to-1 communications. We use Subscriptions, Bundles, and Memberships generally knowing that some merchants refer to it as auto-ship, repeat orders, recurring order, bundles, boxes, etc.

We talk about brands as if they were people.
We help ‘their brand’ rather than ‘the brand’. Say ‘brands’ when listing companies, and say ‘retailers’ when we can’t list brands.

What does this look like in practice?

Sample Landing Page Headlines
01

Copywriting Do's and Don'ts

One of the best things about Ordergroove, and strongest differentiators between us and our competitors, is our employees' tenure. Online commerce and technology has changed drastically since Ordergroove was founded in 2010. As such, certain terminology and phrases have become more correct or less accurate to use.

The following serves as an initial list of copywriting Do and Do Nots.

Copywriting Do's & Don'ts

Merchant or Customer	Client
Platform	App, Tool Suite
Ordergroove	OG
Subscription experience	Subscription program
Recurring revenue	Recurring orders or Autoship
	Tools and Features

We will continue adding to this list over time as our market differentiation, product marketing, and brand evolve.

Colors

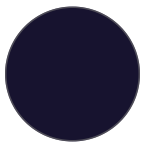

Our visual identity is the visualization of Ordergroove's brand in design. A strong, consistent visual identity is clear, distinct, and differentiated.

Our color palette is bold, bright, and modern. It embraces the use of several high-contrast contrast colors paired with the striking combo of Midnight and White. Our palette is unique in the sense that it doesn't feature a true "hero" color.

This multi-color approach creates a flexible, modern, diverse, and optimistic vibe that lets us tell a variety of stories as we strive to empower all merchants regardless of size, platform, or vertical.

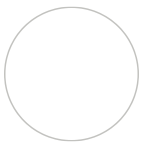

Core Colors

Midnight, White, and Groovy Green are our primary colors. When designing or using color on behalf of Ordergroove ALWAYS lead with Groovy Green 400 against White or Groovy Green 500 against Midnight.

Shades & Tints

Our core brand colors are incredibly bold and vibrant - but they can be limiting in certain applications. We've created a robust selection of shades and tints for each color that greatly expand your options if the situation requires it - Ex. graphs, charts, needing more contrast on a white background, etc.

Groovy Green

Logo

The Ordergroove logo is an evolution of our past with an eye towards the future. The interlocking rings are a symbol of enduring, healthy relationships and a logomark that perfectly embodies Relationship Commerce.

You can download our logo in various sizes, colors, and file formats here.

Primary logo on dark backgrounds

When on a dark background (such as Midnight), our default is to display the logo with white with Groovy Green-500 interlocking rings.

Primary logo on white backgrounds

When placed on a white background, our default is to display the logo in Midnight. The interlocking rings are set in Green-400 which provides better contrast to than Groovy Green on white backgrounds.

Logo Mechanics

The diagram below illustrates the difference between our logo and our logomark. When using the full graphic, this is considered our logo. When using just the interlocking rings in isolation, this is considered our logomark.

Last modified on Fri, 05. Sep 2025 03:53

Logo Usage

When using our logo in a layout, consider the proper amount of spacing and padding around its placement. The size of the logomark is the ideal amount of space between the logo and anything else around it.

Last modified on Fri, 05. Sep 2025 03:53

Logo Colors

Full-color logo

Whenever possible our logo should be displayed on Midnight. By default, the logo should be set in White with our logomark being in Groovy Green. This will be the default presentation on social media and other platforms where a static logo is required.

Default logo colors on dark backgrounds

Default logo colors on white backgrounds

Single-color logo

Some applications may call for the use of our logo on a background different from those specified above. In these instances, a single-color variation (either White or Midnight) of our logo should be used. A single-color variation of the logo may also be used in the case of printing restrictions or merchandise that limits color count such as laser etching or engraving.

When set on a bright / darker color, we should use our logo set in white.

When set on a bright / lighter color, we should use our logo set in midnight.

Another such instance might be when Ordergroove's logo is used in conjunction with multiple other brands, for example in a group-event graphic. In this case a single-color variation of the logo may be used provided that appropriate and equal spacing is respected between the Ordergroove logo and partner logos.

Last modified on Fri, 05. Sep 2025 03:53

Isolated Logomark

Our logomark is a powerful symbol for Relationship Commerce. When used alone, it can add bold brand presence to our work.

You can download our logomark in various sizes, colors, and file formats here.

Our default colorway is a Groovy Green logomark set on a Midnight background.

On white backgrounds we use a more accessible shade of green to allow for better contrast.

Logo Lockups

We've invested deeply in our abilities to partner and co-market with the world's leading brands, technology partners, and agency partners. To ensure we appear consistent and professional, visually, Ordergroove has simple spacing rules for how to use our Logo in conjunction with other brands.

X Lockup
One option for using the Ordergroove logo with other brands is a Midnight, White, or Groovy Green X. This X must be centered vertically and provide equidistant spacing between logos on the right and left hand sides.

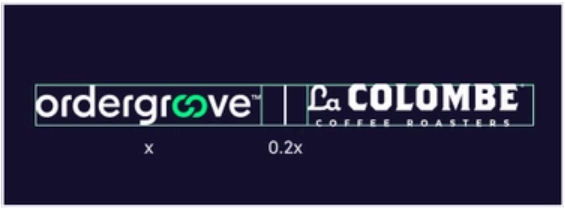

Bar Lockup
Another option for using the Ordergroove logo with another brand is a Midnight, White, or Groovy Green vertical bar (|). This | must be centered and span the full text height of the Ordergroove logo, and be spaced equidistant between both logos on both sides.

Last modified on Fri, 05. Sep 2025 03:53

Logo Don'ts

Our logo should only be used in the ways listed in the prior pages. Always use approved logo lockups when designing on-brand materials.

Don’t edit or adjust the colors of the logo beyond what's listed in our guidelines

Don’t add effects to the logo like drop shadows

Don’t use a low quality or blurry version of the logo

Don’t stretch, skew, or rotate the logo

Don't add effects to the logo (like drop shadows)

Don't outline the logo

Circles

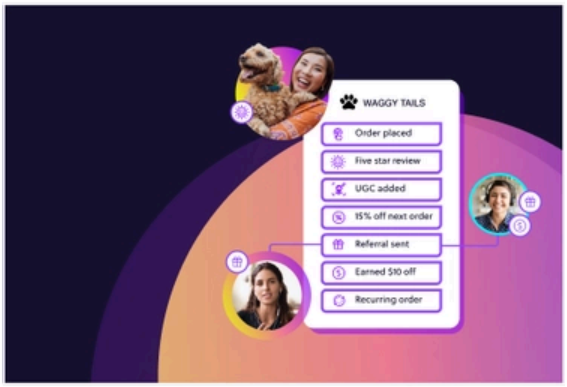

One of Ordergroove's most consistently used graphic design characters are the circle pairs, modeled to resemble the Ordergroove logomark and the bubbling ways frictionless commerce comes alive in the background of consumers' day to day lives.

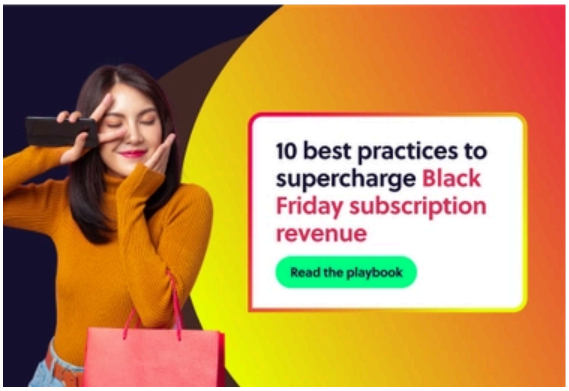

Ordergroove Circle Treatments
Circles as a background or slide element must always be used in pairs with the gradient-colored circle on top of a solid-colored circle. Never as a single circle.

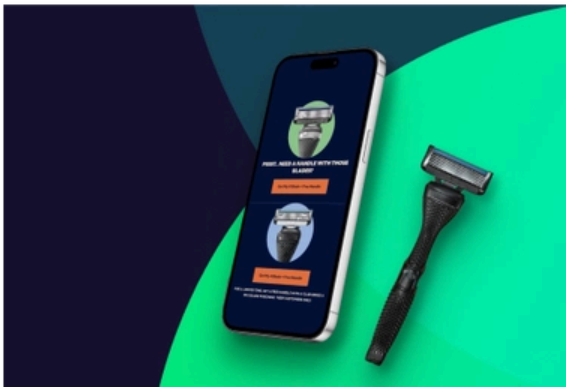

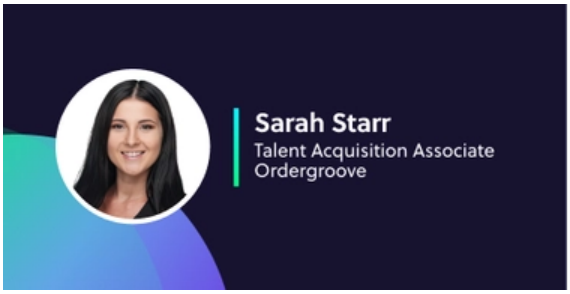

Circle Cutout as frames for profile pictures
Circles as frames must be laid overtop of background elements and feature a White inside stroke around the cropped image that is weighted at 3% of the diameter of the circle.

Circle frames for merchant product photos or stock imagery
Circles as frames must be laid overtop of background elements and may feature an inset image from merchants branding. These images should be bright, colorful, and centered on the product. Square-cropped images tend to be the easiest to work with.

Last modified on Fri, 05. Sep 2025 03:53

Visual Containers

Ordergroove has a specific rounded-corner rectangle that we use in a variety of treatments. Three of the four corners are rounded, and one corner is square. This is to ensure the visuals have a relaxed, inviting, and approachable element that bring the eye back to a key anchor point on the right or left side of the image.

Solid

If a graphic has many visual elements opt for a simple, single-layer visual container.

With Outline

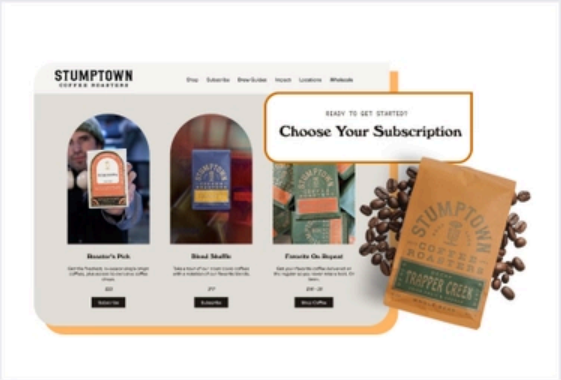

If a graphic has fewer visual elements and light background, opt for a visual container using a gradient outline.

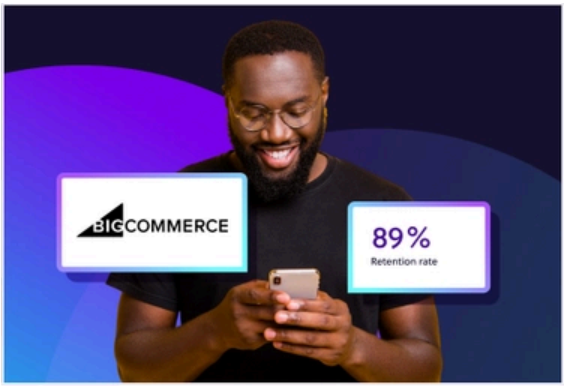

With Dropshadow

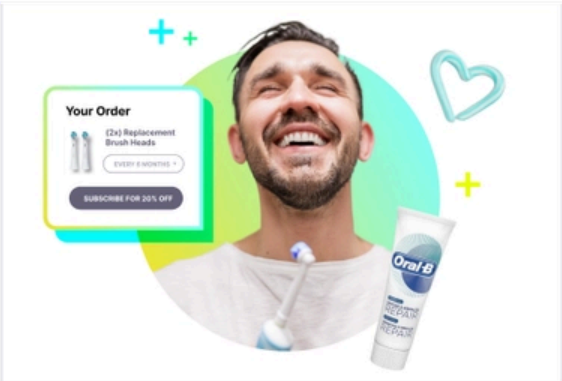

If a graphic has ample negative space, use a solid color or gradient visual container as a dropshadow for the top frame.

Additional Visual Container Examples
In images or assets with multiple Visual Containers, the hard corner must always be the same corner and facing the same direction to give a sense of structure and order to the design. Any image within these Visual Containers should also have three rounded corners and one square corner.

Photography

Our merchants and their customers are the real stars of the show, so we use photography that reflects that. Photography should be people-focused with a bright, modern, and fresh aesthetic. Depictions of people should appear genuine and showcase diversity and positivity. Avoid over-saturated images that depict stock photo poses and cliches.

Cut-Out People Photography
Ordergroove uses a variety of expressive, colorful stock photos to capture attention. In graphic design we use key cutouts against bright, bold color circles in order to draw attention to the title or headline that accompany the design.

Photography don'ts

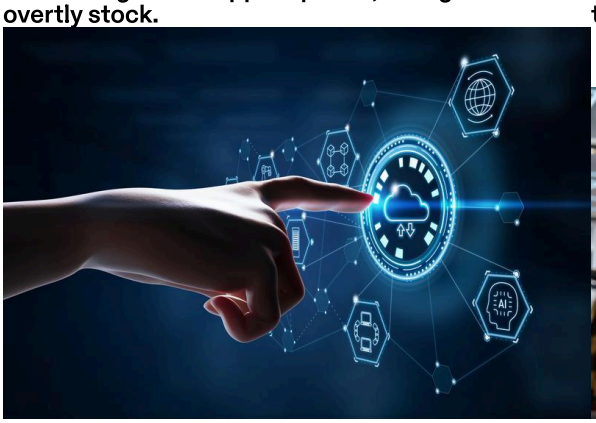

Imagery should have a distinct aesthetic and should never feel overly stock or corporate. Photos featuring people should include a diverse range of ethnicity and genders.

Avoid images that appear posed, disingenuous or overtly stock.

Avoid images that focus on technology more than the people using it.

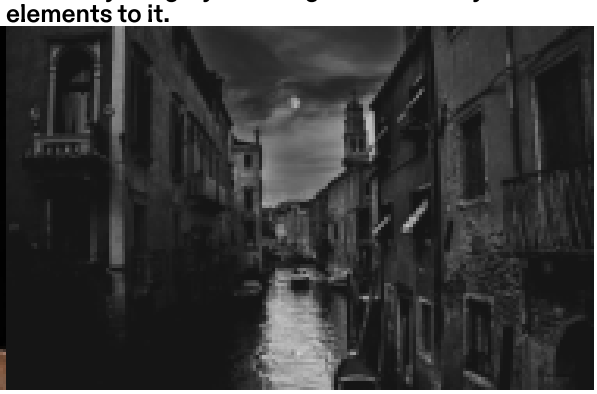

Avoid any imagery that includes graphic elements within the stock photography.

Avoid any imagery with augmented reality elements to it.

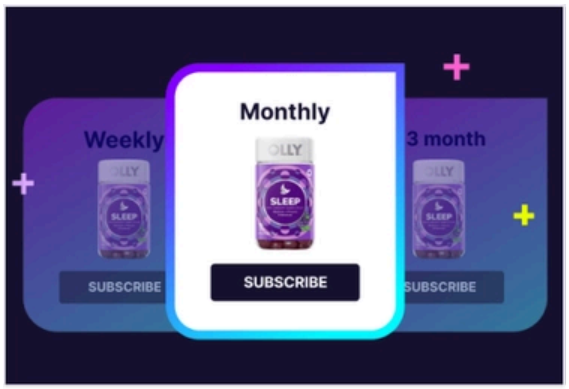

AVOID any images that are overly photoshopped or manipulated (this includes AI-generation styles)

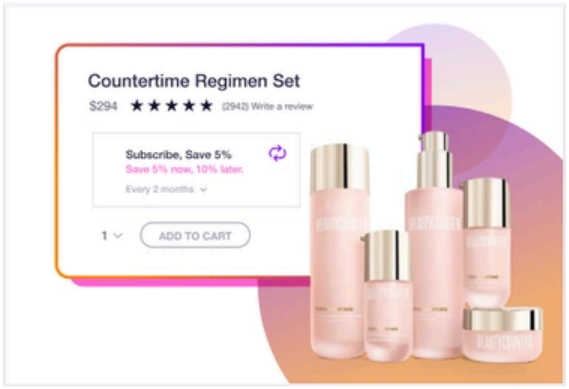

AVOID black and white imagery unless expressly stated in a merchant's brand guidelines

Merchants' Product Photography
When available, ask a merchant for their preferred product assets. Products should be high-resolution, precise, and feature high-contrast. Elect options with bright, modern colors when available.

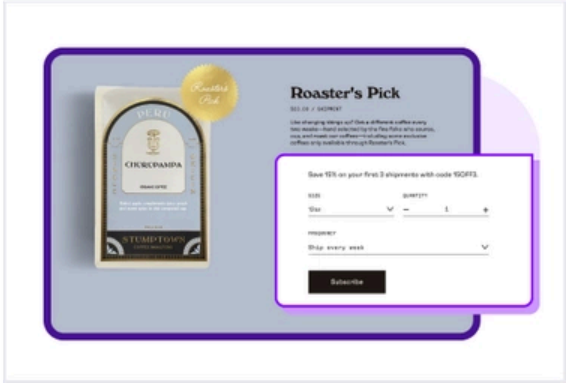

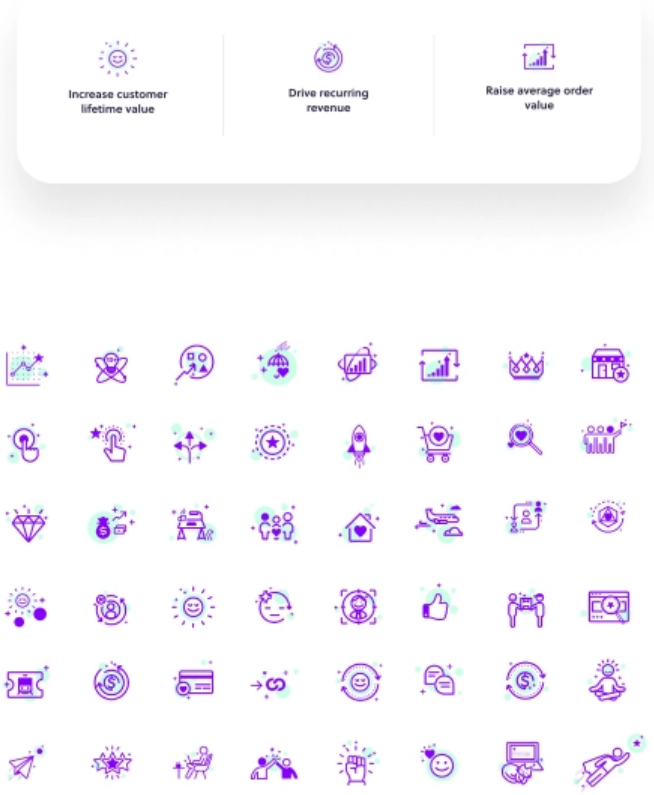

Product photos from merchants are permitted in a lifestyle setting rather than cut out from the image. If a cut-out is available Ordergroove may pair it against circles or in-product situations with colors that contrast enough to make the product shine.

Email Signatures

You can copy + paste your new email signature by accessing this Google Doc.

We've created two email signatures (a simple and a fancy version) for Ordergroove employees to use.

Please use the link above and follow the instructions to update yours.
